

February 10, 1945

Dear Mother,

Today I received your letter of February first. I was very glad to have it.

This afternoon I have taken a shower and cleaned up because Jean is coming out tomorrow to see the chaplain [sic] and then it is my liberty day so I will go back to town with her. If we get to town in time we will probably go to a show.

Speaking of fried chicken that is something that Jean probably hasn't eaten but a very few times in her life. You will have to [page 2] teach her some cooking like you do. Some of your ways will be new to her I am sure. She will learn easily though.

Yesterday I had a letter from Theresa. She said that she hadn't heard from John for awhile but he seemed to like his work all right.

I am going to close now and write to Jean before I go to bed.

Your son,
Tom D
