It has been said that the three most beautiful pieces of literature are: 1. The Lord's Prayer; 2. The Twenty Third Psalm; 3. Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

Following is a changed version of the Twenty Third Psalm that maintains the beauty of the original version and yet adds to its beauty:

The Lord my Shepherd still has been, therefore no want I know:
He leadeth me in pastures green and where calm waters flow.
He makes my soul at peace to be from pain and sore distress,
And for his names's sake guideth me in paths of righteousness.
Yea, though death's darksome vale I trod, yet would I fear no ill,
For ever there thy staff and rod would be my comfort still.
Thou dost for me a table spread in presence of my foes,
With oil anoinest thou my head, my cup it overflows.
Goodness and mercy steadfastly shall follow me always,
And in the house of God shall I dwell to the end of my days.

--Alice Lucas.

Here is food for thought:

"There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
And we must take the current when it serves.....
Or lose our ventures. -- Shakespeare
