

October 8, 1944

Dear Mother,

What are you doing this Sunday? It's a little warmer today than the past few have been. Has in [sic] begun to get cold at home this year.

The mail situation hasn't been any good at all this week. I don't know what has happened to it. I know that I should be getting some. About the only letters I have had have been from Jean.

[page 2] Sometime soon I will send you what I got you for Christmas. I can't do it today as the censor office is not open on Sunday. I guess your packages are on the way by now.

If the Fabens boy did not come to see you I don't think he will because he is not on leave any longer. Let me know if he sends you some pictures and a letter which I gave to him.

How is everyone getting along at home? There is not much new happening here.

Your son,
Tom